Learn new and free ways to express yourself through watercolor with internationally recognized artist Carol Carter. Carol will demonstrate her watercolor technique of wet and loose watercolor through lecture, demonstration, and individual instruction. Each day will begin with a detailed demonstration using an original work as a starting point. Use of color, control of water, compositional considerations and value structure will all be covered. The brilliance of color and the purity of paint application will be emphasized. Afternoons will be devoted to individual instruction as well as group critique. Classes are informal and the discussion is lively and entertaining. The workshop will also include tips on marketing your art, resources for supplies, documenting artwork and developing personal imagery.

Carter lives in St. Louis, but regularly travels the world to teach and participate in workshops, sharing her skills and talents with other artists. She earned her MFA from Washington University and later received an MAA-NEA Fellowship in Painting and Works on Paper. She has continued to create work based on the duality of nature and human's place in the environment.
